Collaboration Brings Student Work to Life

In early November, Mrs. Jewell's 4th grade class submitted original stories to Mrs. Rohlf's Charlotte High School drama class. The high school students read each story and gave written praise to the writers. Next, the drama class selected five stories to turn into short plays. The selected stories were "A Boy and a Dog," by Hayden Sanders; "The Unlucky Penny," by Brady Blair; "Lost in the Future," by Blaze Monroe; "One Wish," by Rylie Vinson; and "The Time You Had to Save Your Dad," by Elijah Patrick.

Over several weeks, the high school students developed scripts, designed costumes, gathered and created props, planned scenery, and memorized lines in order to create a final product.

On Friday, December 15, the project culminated with the high school students performing at Charlotte Upper Elementary for Mrs. Jewell's class, and it was a lot of fun for students both on and off the stage. Mrs. Rohlf and Mrs. Jewell are so proud of their talented students!
